The New Curriculum Management System, Kuali

See attached screenshot of the user interface (first pages) of our new curriculum management system, Kuali, which will replace Curriculum Central over the summer. This is the view faculty will encounter when they go to look up courses or make modifications. It is a work in progress, but if anyone has questions, comments or concerns, let me know and I will forward those to the relevant parties.

Also, as this will go into effect over the summer by exporting the information directly from CC, faculty do not immediately need to practice using it; nevertheless, I will set up sessions to help navigate the pages either at the end of term (second week in May?) or in August. I would like to know how many faculty might be interested.

Again, this is not a final draft. Additions and deletions are still occurring with input from all the campuses.